LIGHT the way

When the sun goes down, it's time to up your style game with these innovative lanterns. The 'Circ M-3727' by Nahrang Studio for Estiluz (right, £266; estiluz.com) is inspired by the circus, with its handle reminiscent of a trapeze ring, while Emiliana Design Studio's 'June' for Vibia (below, from £894; vibia.com) glows like an enchanted crystal ball. The 'Sunlight Bell' from Eva Solo (far right, £90; evasolo.com) has strong eco credentials, 100 per cent solar powered, it fully charges in just eight hours.

CHISELLED BEAUTY

The first pieces of outdoor furniture to feature in Salvatori's home range, 'Span' by architect and designer John Pawson revels in the luxury of its materials. Generous slabs of Bianco Carrara marble become seats and tabletops. Beautiful in their simplicity, they're supported by gold-tinged Avana sandstone. Coffee table, £4,640 (salvatori.it).

FORGET ME KNOT

Synthetic rope is extra-strong and hardwearing, making it a fantastic material for outdoor use. John Lewis & Partner's 'No.188' garden chairs, part of the brand's in-house 'Design Project' range, feature flat rope artistically woven onto a rounded frame. £249 each (johnlewis.com).

BRAND TO KNOW

DEDON

Known for its woven furniture, this firm is breaking new ground

Winning a 2019 ELLE Decoration British Design Award for its Barber & Osgerby-designed 'Brea' modular outdoor seating system, Dedon is continuing to go from strength to strength with its new collection. 'Our aim from the beginning was to change the way we live outdoors,' explains Sonja van der Hage, the brand's chief creative officer. That involves moving towards pieces that work both outside and in. New additions include the 'Aiir' chair by GamFratesi, which is ultra-lightweight, as well as three portable lighting designs by Sebastian Herkner, Harry Paul and Stephen Burks. The 'Cirql' collection by German designer Werner Aisslinger builds upon the brand's expertise in woven furniture, with an intricate geometric pattern developed in partnership with Dedon's master weaver in the Philippines (dedon.de).
